The topic of this research is how to motivate children in learning language, because motivation is the reason or power to spur on someone to do something. In every ways of life, whatever activities we do, motivation is one of the most important things to give us spirit and power to do it. In learning language (for children or adult) motivation is the most important reason after language aptitude to make easier in learning program. As its necessities, motivation are divided into two kinds ; intrinsic and extrinsic motivation. Intrinsic motivation are the urge to engage in the learning activity for its own sake and it is rooted in the previous attitude of the learners. And extrinsic motivation is motivation that is divided from external incentives as distinct from the wish to learn for its own sake or interest in task. But both of these motivations are the same important and effectives for those who needed.
