Great Expectations was written by Charles Dickens. It is reflections of Charles Dickens experience when he saw his father put into prison in 1824 for not paying his debts. It left him believing that one would never know when life would become difficult. This belief, that life can suddenly change for the worse. Great Expectations is one of Charles Dickens best novels. The story is about a boy named Pip, who has one wish in his life, to become a gentleman. His poor uneducated background is changed when a mysterious person gives Pip enough money to make his dream come true. The aims of this study are to find out the characterizations of Pip and his relationship with Estella from Psychological aspects. The writer reads and analyzes only the characterizations of the main character, Pip, and his relationship with Estella. In writing this scientific research paper, the writer uses Great Expectations as the main data. The writer also takes some books, dictionaries, and watches the movie. The writer uses library research in arranging this research paper and also uses the internet facilities to complete the data. Before analyzing data, the writer reads the novel and also watches the movie, understands the content of the novel and the movie, selects the problem and gives the definition. Finally, the writer analyzes the novel by structural approach. The result of this scientific research shows that the character of Pip is ambitious person because he is only thinking about how to be a gentleman without try hard and sacrifice and he tends to be negative self-esteem because Pip cannot overcome the problem in his life. In addition, his relationship with Estella cannot help and support him to be a good man because Estella never loves Pip and she is only wants to be his friends.
